was playing around in google earth and ran across this place between Broussard and St Martinville...who does it belong to?

located @ 30.148408E -91.917634W almost exactly 2 miles NE of where LA 96 and HWY 90 hit.

Did you just roll up on that? Seems pretty random unless you were scoping something in the general area.

looking at something in st martinville...zoomed out and noticed the large plots of land with trees planted in neat grid SE of house along LA 96...looked at property and saw house with helicopter pad.

If you look close, it looks like he owns a lot of that land south and to the east of that house, and the property looks like it has a couple of other homes on it...

He does, he owns a huge tract of land. The more Lafayette expands south the more valuable it gets.

Shit, it would be a years salary for me to afford the fence around it.

Listen up you school-tards "After a few days at the local university, Matt Stuller decides he would rather build his own business than listen to others talk about it."

What are you going to do?

yep thats his place.... old roommate of mine's dad is friends with him. They went to high school together. Stuller's dad was a dentist and he started playing with his equipment that he used to make the braces for people and he began making jewelry. Sold that shite out of his trunk, went to USL for 1 semester and the rest is history. He spoke at my friends graduation. Kinda funny, that a man who owns a worldwide company has no degree and spoke at a business school grad....

This.
I just looked at his bio page on his company's website. Apparently started working for a jeweler when he was a junior in HS. Started his own business at 19.

LOL, yeah, that's a lot of fence. But that has to be one the prettiest tracts of land around the area I've seen with the rolling hills etc IMO. The guy is definitely an OT Baller, could possibly be the OT Baller CEO. Goes to show you what having goals in life, HARD WORK, taking risks, and determination can do and not depending on the government.

Seems like a theme here ... How is that alphabet soup behind your name going to really help you? Ask these two guys ...
